Who has not been charmed and instructed by Travels and Incidents of Travel in the Holy Land India Europe America, &c? Travellers of every variety of talent, almost from time immemorial, have transmitted through the press the result of journeyings and patient investigation. And what has not been narrated by one, whose genius might have instigated to particularize elaborately on the topic suited to his peculiar cast of mind, has been enrolled by another, signalized for a species of investigation unthought of by his predecessor, till information suited to every grade of intellect has been so fully given, that firmness is requisite to bear up against the impression, that public sentiment may not label a new production with thirst for booknaking, egotism, or the like. Not so with the traveller to the heavenly city. A field of investigation, boundless as eternity, is before him. Earth hath its boundaries :but the inquiring, insatiate mind of the heavenly traveller, is no where, in all his journeying, met with the interdict, Hitherto thou come, but no further.
